About ILAS

The Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS) is the center for research, teaching and discussion on Latin America at Columbia University. Its main goal is to bring together and provide resources for Columbia faculty, students and visiting scholars, recognizing the diversity of their interests and approaches while strengthening their links with Latin America and with communities of Latin American origin in the United States.

Founded in 1962, the Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS) is one of the oldest institutes of its type in the nation. The Institute draws upon a long and nationally distinguished history at Columbia dating back to the arrival of pioneers in their field, including Frank Tannenbaum (History, 1935-1962), Charles Wagley (Anthropology, 1946-1971), Albert Hirschman (Economics, 1958-1964), and Douglas Chalmers (Political Science, 1967-2005).

The Institute distributes resources to support Latin American research and teaching at Columbia. Named by the Department of Education as a National Resource Center for Latin American Studies, ILAS is part of the New York City Consortium on Latin America along with the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies at New York University (CLACS). With financial assistance from the Tinker Foundation, the U.S. Department of Education, the Lemann Foundation, and the Consejo Nacional para la Ciencia y la Tecnología (CONACyT) in Mexico, ILAS is able to award various fellowships and grants to faculty and graduate and undergraduate students to further their research and as such enrich the academic community. The Institute also benefits from its associations with the financial, diplomatic, and corporate centers of New York City, and with other research universities in the area.

ILAS provides the venue for a variety of public events featuring distinguished speakers, research reports, seminars, conferences, and a lunchtime lecture series. It assists graduate students in the social sciences to develop a program of study from the wide range of Latin American courses available throughout the university. ILAS offers a Master of Arts in Latin American and Caribbean Studies, the Undergraduate major and concentration in Latin American Studies, and a Certificate in Latin American Studies to M.A. and Ph.D. students.

ILAS has four main centers and programs that add particular strengths to the educational, research, and outreach of the Institute.

- The Lemann Center for Brazilian Studies
- The Center for Mexican Studies
- The Greater Caribbean Studies Program
- The Cuba Program

Undergraduate Program

The Major in Latin American and Caribbean Studies is designed to give undergraduates the general mastery of a discipline and at the same time permit them to do specialized work in the language, history, and culture of the Latin American region. Students take core courses that give them grounding in the language, history, politics, and cultures of Latin America as well as courses in a discipline of choice. The disciplines of choice include anthropology, art history and archaeology, economics, history, music, political science, sociology, Spanish and Portuguese, and urban studies.

Requirement for the Major in Latin American and Caribbean Studies

A minimum number of 31 credits (a minimum of 10 courses) is needed to fulfill the requirements for the Major in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. Up to 12 credits for requirement C (Discipline of Choice) can be earned through study abroad. Students are strongly encouraged to explore study abroad options before their junior year. Upon return, they should submit syllabi and all coursework related to each course taken abroad for approval by the director of undergraduate studies (DUS).

1. Five (5) courses from the following fourteen (14) courses. One of these courses must be LACV CC1020: Primary Texts of Latin American Civilization, HIST UN2660: Latin American Civilization I, or HIST UN2661: Latin American Civilization II:

- B. One course on Spanish, Portuguese, or an indigenous language at the intermediate or advanced level: If students can demonstrate advance knowledge of one of these languages they can replace this course with a course on other languages at any level
- C. Discipline of Choice/Specialization: Four courses in a discipline of choice or specialization with substantive focus on Latin America. Of these four courses: 1 must be a Seminar within the choice/specialization, at least 2 courses must be within the choice/specialization, and 1 course may be outside of their choice/specialization. The DUS advises students on areas of specialization and must approve courses with substantial Latin American or Caribbean contents not included in the list of eligible courses.

Concentration in Latin American and Caribbean Studies

The Concentration in Latin American and Caribbean Studies is designed to give undergraduates the general mastery of a discipline and at the same time permit them to do specialized work in the language, history, and culture of the Latin American region.

A minimum of 18 credits (a minimum of 6 courses) is needed to fulfill the requirements for the Concentration in Latin American and Caribbean studies. The requirements are broken down as the following:

A. Three (3) courses from the following fourteen (14) courses. One of these courses must be LACV CC1020: Primary Texts of Latin American Civilization, HIST UN2660: Latin American Civilization I, or HIST UN2661: Latin American Civilization II:

B. One course on Spanish, Portuguese, or an indigenous language at the intermediate or advanced level: If students can demonstrate advance knowledge of one of these languages they can replace this course with a course on other languages at any level.

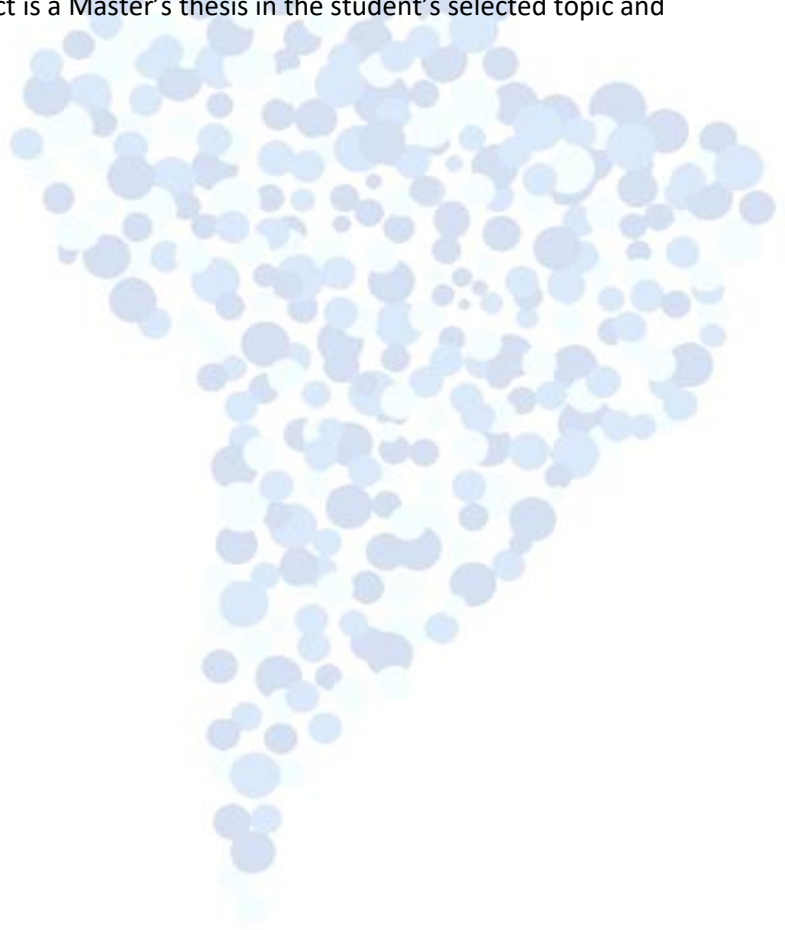

C. Discipline of Choice/Specialization: Two courses in a discipline of choice or specialization with substantive focus on Latin America. Of these two courses: 1 must be a Seminar within the choice/specialization, and 1 course within the choice/specialization. Up to 6 credits for requirement C (Discipline of Choice) can be earned through study abroad. Students are strongly encouraged to explore study abroad options before their junior year. Upon return, they should submit syllabi and all coursework related to each course taken abroad for approval by the director of undergraduate studies (DUS). The DUS advises students on areas of specialization and must approve courses with substantial Latin American or Caribbean contents not included in the list of eligible courses.

MARSLAC Program

The interdisciplinary M.A. program in Regional Studies—Latin America and the Caribbean (MARSLAC) provides a broad social science-based approach to modern and contemporary Latin America and the Caribbean. The program uniquely combines a highly interdisciplinary core curriculum, with ample flexibility to allow students to develop a custom-tailored program of study.

The curriculum combines core seminars on region-specific scholarship and research with the opportunity to take courses in different disciplines throughout Columbia University, including, for example, history, economics, political science, anthropology, international affairs, law, and business.

Students develop a highly interdisciplinary understanding of the region through exposure to relevant scholarship on key issues of contemporary Latin America (democratization, rule of law, urban development, environmental change, trade and immigration, gender relations, cultural expression of diversity, among others). Students also hone their regional knowledge and research and analytical skills through developing their own original projects under the advisement of ILAS affiliated Columbia faculty. The program's capstone project is a Master's thesis in the student's selected topic and cultural/geographic area of interest.

2021 - 2022 ILAS STUDENT FUNDING FOR UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS

The Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS) at the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (GSAS) provides several opportunities to support and encourage undergraduate research and training linked to Latin America and the Caribbean. These grant and fellowship opportunities are made possible through funding from the Lemann Foundation, the Tannenbaum Fund, and other sources.

The 2021-2022 Applications include the following opportunities for students at Columbia:

Deadline: Friday, March 25, 2022

UNDERGRADUATE INTERNSHIP TRAVEL GRANTS

Intended for undergraduate students who have declared their major or concentration in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (LCRS).

- The maximum requested funding is $2,000 towards transportation and housing.
- The research or internship must be of at least 4 weeks long.

Deadline: Early Spring semester (TBA)

FLAS ACADEMIC YEAR 2022-2023

The Foreign Language and Area Studies (FLAS) award offers fellowship assistance to students undergoing intermediate, or advanced training in modern foreign languages and related international area studies.

- Open to US citizens, nationals, and residents
- $10,000 AY institutional payment and $5,000 AY stipend
- Undergraduates can study Portuguese or Amerindian languages
- The availability of AY FLAS Fellowships For 2022--2023 and beyond will be contingent upon confirmation of funding from the U.S. Department of Education. We will be notified of the grant by end of summer 2022 or early fall
